Jane combines the best of traditional techniques with modern ideas when producing her pieces. It is the movement within the metal which inspires her. Jane’s work explores many possibilities from large ruffs made by crocheting with silver and coated copper wire to texturing sheet metal with lace, leaves and wallpapers. The V&A Museum has already exhibited her work five times.

The Maker’s Art is a contemporary range of artworks, ceramics, jewellery and sculpture that complement the imagination and enchantment of Heath Robinson’s work. The makers change every six months, - this is now our seventh group - adding more valuable creative partnerships and creating a distinctive decorative art marketplace at the Heath Robinson Museum.

Jane Prentice is a trained jeweller and designer who uses traditional and modern silversmithing techniques. Her latest work is mainly inspired by the natural world. Alongside this, you can enjoy her ‘storytelling’ pieces; tiny figures, the cogs and wheels inspired by Heath Robinson’s illustrations. Jewellery can be commissioned and Jane also supports charity fundraising with her work.
